CELEBRATE CONSTITUTION DAY!

On Sept. 17, 1787, the Constitutional Congress signed and sent the Constitution to the 13 states for ratification.

America is a religiously free nation.

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

— First Amendment to the Constitution, adopted 1791

"The purpose of separation of church and state is to keep forever from these shores the ceaseless strife that has soaked the soil of Europe with blood for centuries."

— James Madison

"... the government of the United States of America is not in any sense founded on the Christian Religion, ..."

— John Adams

"I am for freedom of religion, and against all maneuvers to bring about a legal ascendancy of one sect over another."

— Thomas Jefferson

America is an idea, an experiment constantly being challenged, correcting mistakes, and moving forward toward the promise of freedom for all.

"True patriotism springs from a belief in the dignity of the individual, freedom and equality not only for Americans but for all people on earth, universal brotherhood and goodwill"

— Eleanor Roosevelt

"What's brilliant about the United States system of government is separation of power. Not only the executive, legislative, judicial branches, but also the independence of the military..., [under civilian control] and independent media and press, and independent central bank."

— Faisal Abdul Rauf

"The life of the nation is secure only while the nation is honest, truthful, and virtuous."

— Frederick Douglas

"[We] don't believe in the Constitution because [we] are American. [We] are Americans because [we] believe in the promises of the Constitution."

— J.S.B. Morse

Sponsored by Patriotic Americans, your neighbors, and lovers of our Constitution, including its promise of a more just future for all. —

The New Colossus

*"...A mighty woman with a torch,...,and her name Mother of Exiles.
From her beacon-hand Glows world-wide welcome:
...cries she [w]ith silent lips. 'Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore.
Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost to me,
I lift my lamp beside the golden door!!"*

A GENTLEMAN AND A PRO

Thank you for sharing the news of Sam Brown's passing (EW 8/25). I heard his voice singing above the post office traffic before I ever met him. His lovely voice and his guitar playing eventually led me to asking him to play at a wedding celebration my fiancé and I hosted for friends and family.

Sam humored me and delivered on my request for an acoustic version of Pete Townshend's "Let My Love Open the Door." He was an unassuming gentleman and a seasoned professional. I hope he knew that he had fans in our community who appreciated his talents and his gentle soul.

Rock on, Sam! You will be missed.

GOOD RIDDANCE, SYRETT

I honestly don't know every single detail about Claire Syrett being recalled. I do, however, live in Ward 7. What I am pretty sure of is that the Lane Transit District's MovingAhead project will do (as usual) more harm than good if it is followed through with. Eugene and LTD constantly deceive us regarding the effects of this or that plan, project, etc. How anyone over the age of 9 can trust city government anymore is a mystery to me.

But the real laugh line, the bone-crushing irony, is her claiming in Slant (9/8), that "They used extreme rhetoric" to get her recalled. This coming from a woman who represents a political party to whom every disagreement must be racially motivated, every issue is a crisis and every crisis is a life or death, end-of-life-as-we-know-it catastrophe.

And how the fu is it a "Trumpian lie" to show concern, get people motivated, do some legwork and get a career politician recalled? The editor(s) that wrote the piece probably wanted the headline, "Trump and Russian disinformation gets Syrett recalled."

GIVE UNSAFE PASSING A PASS

I was cycling westbound on West 3rd at Lincoln when some hot shot food delivery guy (full disclosure: I used to do food delivery) gunned it and passed the car in front of him right next to the (thankfully well-attended) child care for the rock climbing gym. If I hadn't been born on high alert something really bad might have happened.

If we need to hold a bake sale to pay for a double solid yellow line for those two blocks to meet the crumbling double yellow east of Lincoln, I'll take a dozen of those brownies. Or maybe borrow one of those artists who are decorating the storm drains.

I'll even donate my labor. Pretty sure I can still paint a straight line.

SITTING BY THE PHONE, WAITING FOR HELP

Why are there no mental health services in Eugene? I am a recovering alcoholic with depression and Asperger's syndrome, and I can't find a therapist in this town to save my life.

I'm on a waiting list with Chrysalis Behavioral Health Outpatient Services, who have told me that the waiting list is a month long, and if I don't answer the phone when they call me, they'll just go to the next person on the list. Am I just supposed to sit by my phone for a month and hope I don't miss the call?

No, so I have been looking for someone who can help me sooner on Pacific Source's official website hoping to get help sooner. However, even when I find someone my insurance will pay for, they don't pick up the phone. I sit there listening to a robot talk for 10 minutes, only to be sent to an answering machine telling me to leave a voicemail and wait for a call back, or that they're not accepting new patients and to leave a message if I want to join their waitlist.

We have a mental health care crisis in this country and it feels like the people who are supposed to help us don't care.

Doctors are not heroes, they are not public servants, they are capitalist and all they care about is making money and if they can't make money off you, they don't care if you live or die.

A West Side Story

THE WEST LANE COUNTY COMMISSIONER RACE COULD CHANGE THE DIRECTION OF COUNTY GOVERNMENT LEADERSHIP

By Henry Houston

The race for the West Lane County Board of County Commissioners seat could change the direction of county leadership. The board is technically nonpartisan, but political beliefs underlie many of its votes, which affect anything from land use to human services. After Springfield's David Loveall eked out a win over incumbent Lane County Commissioner Joe Berney in May, the Nov. 8 general election could tilt county leadership toward a conservative or liberal dominant majority, which could have ramifications in a post-Roe v. Wade political landscape.

The general election race for the west Lane district, which includes Junction City, Santa Clara and runs out to Florence, has retiring Commissioner Jay Bozievich's hand-picked successor Ryan Ceniga, backed by natural resource extraction companies, pushing for relaxing timber policies and claiming that rural voices aren't being heard on the board.

Dawn Lesley, who says the county needs to invest in preparedness for climate change while adopting future clean technologies and advocating for rural affordable housing strategies, agrees that rural voices of west Lane haven't been heard.

"If they haven't felt represented for the last 12 years, they only have to look at the person who picked Ceniga," Lesley says, referencing Bozievich, who has followed en vogue conservative movements, from the Tea Party of the early 2010s to defending Christopher Columbus when commissioners were discussing officially recognizing Indigenous Peoples Day in 2020.

The May primary race had five candidates, and Ceniga led the votes by about 1.5 percent. Since he didn't secure more than 50 percent of the vote, the election has moved to a runoff between him and Lesley, the top two vote-getters.

Lesley ran for the seat in 2014, but lost to Bozievich by 74 votes in the primary election.

Although Lane County government doesn't implement timber policy in Oregon, Ceniga says he would advocate to relax forest regulations, something he says he's heard from rural residents that Lane County isn't utilizing its forests.

"Part of it is relationships," he says. He adds that he's become friends with Republican state Rep. Boomer Wright, who supports passing pro-timber policies in the Legislature. "That's how you do that. You don't get to make that decision, but you're the voice for that decision."

Lesley says that Ceniga — like Bozievich — refers to climate change as something that's not settled science. "The science has been clear for a long time," she says. "Anybody pretending that it isn't is either not well educated or deliberately trying to obstruct."

She says that agricultural producers have been living the past 13 years of drought and are headed to a 14th year. "That hurts the rural area, which hurts the metro areas because we all are going to rise together or fall together," she adds.

Lesley says she wants to work forward with the county's climate action plan, which will reduce greenhouse gas emissions and invest in future technology. "We're going to need to invest in emergency preparedness so that we're ready to take care of each other," she adds.

Ceniga says crime in Eugene and Springfield has worsened because jails are releasing inmates too soon. He recently toured the Lane County Jail and he says that inmates who have a drug use problem need 60 days to think clearly again but are often discharged right after being booked.

But he adds that the county jail shouldn't be used as rehab. "That's the only treatment right now," he says. "It's time to try something different."

Lesley says that the county not having enough housing worsens the county's mental health and drug use problems, "which makes it harder for them to have stable housing, and you have this vicious cycle of issues compounding each other."

She says the state Legislature needs to ease restrictions on establishing affordable housing outside of urban growth boundaries. Although Eugene-Springfield is where most of the county's population is, she says rural areas need affordable housing units, too. "We cannot forget that Deadwood has an affordable housing problem, Florence has a horrible, affordable housing crisis," she says. "Homelessness is a problem in places like Mapleton and Junction City."

Lesley's campaign has raised more money than Ceniga so far — $286,817 with an average contribution of $335. Her largest contributor is Lane County's AFSCME union at $20,000. Her other contributors include environmental activist Tom Bowerman ($7,000), Madison, Wisconsin-based philanthropist Rebecca Krantz ($15,000) and state Rep. John Lively of Springfield ($2,000).

Ceniga has raised $170,083, and his average contribution is $1,148. Many of his contributors are resource extraction companies, such as Wildish Land Company ($10,000), Swanson Brothers Lumber Company ($3,000) and plywood supplier States Industries ($12,000).

But more than one-third of his money — $59,166 — has come from the Community Action Network political action committee. According to its campaign finance activity, Community Action Network takes money from timber, fossil fuel and other resource extraction companies, and then gives it to conservative politicians and PACs.

Ceniga also received an in-kind donation from Oregon Right to Life, which the organization reported to OreStar was used for polls and surveys.

Ceniga says that he's pro-life and that life begins with a heartbeat, though he recognizes some exceptions with abortion in cases of incest and rape. "Roe v. Wade overturning gave it back to the state, and I don't know if it should've ever left the state to begin with," he says. "There's extremes on both sides, and the truth is somewhere in the middle."

But he says if elected he'd listen to constituent needs, whatever that would be with reproductive rights at the county level. If elected, Ceniga and Loveall would both be commissioners endorsed by the Oregon Right-to-Life organization.

Access to abortion in Oregon could change if the Republican Party took over the Legislature and governor's office in future elections, which could mean having access decided at the county level, Lesley says. And even if abortion remains legal in Oregon, Lesley says having a board that is pro-choice in the post-Roe era has an impact on which services get funded.

"Every county public health authority will always have to decide where they distribute the resources," she says. "They never have infinite resources. You have to make decisions about which services you provide and how easy or how hard it is for folks to access those services depend on leadership decisions." ■

• We hear rumblings that more recall elections will be coming to Eugene after the unfortunately successful recall from office of City Councilor Claire Syrett. This is a misuse of recall, an extraordinary process meant for egregious behavior, and voters should not fall for it. A Police Beating in Cottage Grove

WITNESSES SAY A MENTALLY ILL MAN WAS BEATEN BY POLICE OFFICERS ON A CITY STREET

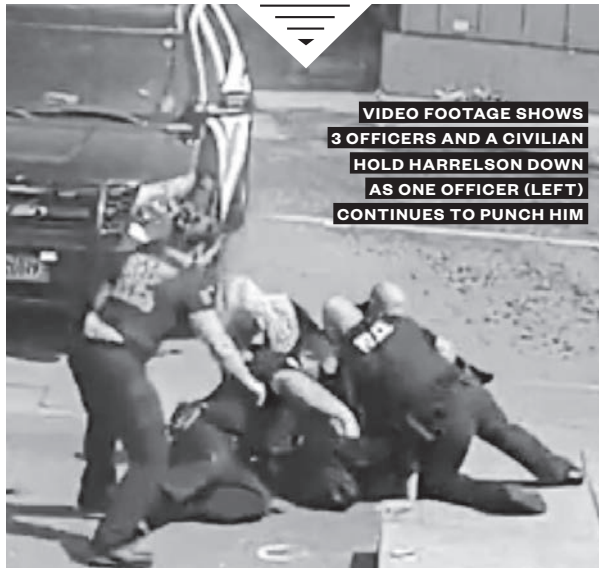

By Camilla Mortensen

When he walked over to the spot where he'd seen several Cottage Grove police officers holding down a young man who was being punched repeatedly, Duane Raley saw the blotch of blood left behind on the pavement.

Alexander Harrelson, age 26 and schizophrenic, also lost two teeth in the Sept. 1 beating, Raley says. Raley watched what happened from across the street, as did Bookmine owner Gail Hoelzle. He says when he spoke to Harrelson's mother after the incident she indicated that her son suffers from schizophrenia and autism.

It was Hoelzle who had called the police. Not to file an official complaint, she says, but simply to alert them. Hoelzle, who is on the board of South Lane Mental Health, says the situation called for a CAHOOTS-like response, but unlike Eugene, Cottage Grove does not yet have a mobile crisis unit to defuse such situations, something Hoelzle and others hope to change. A group of concerned citizens wants to ensure that Harrelson's beating is investigated and such a thing doesn't happen again in their city.

Harrelson was playing with a sword, dancing around with it, while music played loudly at 2:40 pm on a Thursday afternoon behind a building in downtown Cottage Grove. "He's very good at what he's doing, and he's not being threatening, but the music is loud," she says she told the dispatcher. She says she was not concerned that anyone would be stabbed, but rather when Harrelson was swinging the sword from a strap on his wrist, she worried it would come loose.

She says she was told by the dispatcher that "We will have somebody come over and say hello." Instead she says she watched several officers, and a man who appears to be a civilian, hold Harrelson down as he was punched repeatedly.

Security footage from a nearby building tells the same tale. First Harrelson and a companion are seen hanging out behind the building while Harrelson dances with the sword. Then, after Harrelson has already put down the sword, the police arrive. Harrelson walks toward one of the officers with his hands above his head. The footage doesn't have audio, but Raley says the officer said to Harrelson to put his hands in the air and "Come over here, and you won't be arrested."

Hoelzle says it looked like the officers were familiar with Harrelson and knew his name. Lane County arrest records show that Harrelson has been in and out of jail in the past.

Eugene Weekly reached out to the Cottage Grove Police Department for comment, as well as to Eugene Police Sgt. Ryan Nelson, who is investigating the incident. An EPD spokesperson says "because it is an internal investigation, he won't be making any comments on it." The Cottage Grove police, whose chief is on administrative leave, did not respond before press time. The Cottage Grove Municipal Court docket shows Harrelson is being charged with disorderly conduct II, resisting arrest and assault IV.

Raley says Nelson has not reached out to him, despite him witnessing the incident firsthand.

What Raley saw next perplexed him. Harrelson's hands were being held behind his back by an officer. "He was calm; he didn't struggle," Raley says, "They could have just put the cuffs on him."

Instead, Raley says, the officers told Harrelson to lay down on his stomach, at which point Harrelson began to howl. He says he saw a burly officer knock Harrelson to the pavement. "Officers jumped on and began beating him severely."

Hoelzle says once the beating began she called the police again, concerned about what she was seeing.

The video footage shows at least one of the officers punching Harrelson repeatedly while several hold him down, and later Harrelson being put into a squad car with blood on his face. Medics were later called and arrived with a stretcher but left without taking Harrelson out of the car. Raley questions how officers expected Harrelson to get on his stomach "with four burly police officers beating him to a pulp." He describes Harrelson's face as looking like "raw meat."

He says after the incident he saw the police shake hands with the man in civilian clothing who had jumped in with the officers.

Hoelzle, who still feels guilt for making the call that precipitated the violence, says Harrelson's mother stopped by The Bookmine to make sure Hoelzle was OK after witnessing the incident. His mother also gave permission for the video footage of the incident to be shared without blurring her son's face, Hoelzle says.

U.S. Sen. Ron Wyden announced Sept. 12 that Oregon is the first state to earn federal approval for Medicaid reimbursement of community-based mobile crisis intervention services like CAHOOTS that help people struggling with mental health and substance use disorders. In 2021, while campaigning for the legislation in Eugene, Wyden said that his brother was schizophrenic.

Another citizen concerned about Harrelson's beating is Bruce Kelsh, chair of Cottage Grove's First Presbyterian Church Earth and Social Justice Committee. He says the committee created a "Passing on Kindness fund in the city budget that encourages officers to acts of kindness, building relationships, and adding to the positive image of the police in Cottage Grove."

He says, "We support the police and good policing, but we also support accountability so that the standards of good policing are upheld."

Kelsh says the "event speaks loudly for the need for officers to have and use de-escalation skills and the creation of a mobile crisis group similar to CAHOOTS in Eugene, so something like this doesn't happen again."

Harrelson currently sits in the Cottage Grove municipal jail, awaiting the city's weekly Thursday morning court arraignment, represented by a city-funded public defender. The concerned Cottage Grove citizens say they are worried that Harrelson will wind up taking a plea bargain for allegations he is not guilty of and that they cannot reach his public defender. ■

WHEN THE CEDAR CREEK FIRE BLEW UP NEAR OAKRIDGE, LIVESTOCK NEEDED SHELTER

By Henry Houston

Under a smoke-filled sky at the Lane Events Center, children throw a football on a patch of grass, Greenhill Humane Society volunteers walk small dogs and a few hundred feet away the horse arena houses scores of livestock.

In one day, the Cedar Creek Fire nearly doubled its size — going from 33,099 acres on Sept. 8 to 51,814 acres on Sept. 9. It now stands at 92,548 acres with 0 percent containment.

The wildfire that began August 1 with lightning strikes in the Willamette National Forest threatened Oakridge and Westfir when dry weather and east winds both blew it up and toward the mountain communities, sparking red flag warnings and then evacuations on Friday, Sept. 9.

With past wildfires to have learned from, including the devastating 2020 Holiday Farm Fire and the 2021 Kwis Fire that threatened Oakridge, Lane County's operations for transporting livestock have become smoother, says spokesperson Devon Ashbridge.

The Lane Events Center wasn't the only refuge for animals affected by hazardous air quality and the threat of wildfire. Emily Honey, a volunteer who helped some residents transport livestock, says area barns offered space to reduce the volume of animals at the fairgrounds, as well as offered places for livestock that can't shelter in close quarters.

Because climate change means wildfires will reoccur in Oregon, Honey says she hopes Lane County government will implement some changes to make animal evacuations easier.

Hours before the Cedar Creek Fire grew, Lane County government opened a large animal evacuation shelter at 8 am that Friday when there was a Level One "be ready" evacuation notice for the residents. And right away people were calling to reserve space.

"About five minutes after we got here, we had a call that we had five horses on the way within the hour," says Lane County Animal Welfare Officer Isabel Merritt. "We had about eight horses by 11 am, and I started having poultry, goats and sheep starting to show up."

On Friday evening, the evacuation level for Oakridge and Westfir was raised to Level Three — go now. By the end of Saturday, Sept. 10, the Lane Events Center, which has a capacity for about 600 animals, had about 100, including horses, goats, chickens and rabbits.

The county recommends that residents evacuate their livestock by Level One (get ready) evacuation notices, but especially by Level Two, says Ashbridge. "There's often no time during a Level Three, and it can be hard to get trailers on the road," she says. "We definitely stress with large animals and livestock the earlier you move them the better."

Level Three notices say to leave immediately and not to stop to collect belongings.

Response to the Cedar Creek Fire for livestock evacuation has operated differently than the Holiday Farm Fire, Ashbridge says. "We've also built relationships with the livestock owners in Oakridge because we went through a similar situation last year," she says of the Kwis Fire. "We're able to get this up and running much more quickly."

The biggest difference from Holiday Farm, Ashbridge says, is how much notice residents had. "That was not an option for the vast majority of people evacuated from the Holiday Farm Fire. That fire began at night and moved quickly," she says. "It's been really wonderful to see the folks from Oakridge understand that they've been given this gift of time and take advantage of it to move their stock."

Not all animals were transported to the Lane Events Center. When red flag warnings were issued over the dry winds, Honey, who trains horses out of Pleasant Hill, 31 miles from Oakridge, says she filled water buckets and hooked up her truck and trailer.

"Pretty much everyone was pretty traumatized by the 2020 fires," she says. "The biggest difference from 2020 to now is the majority of people had plans, and we were planning way earlier."

Honey also turned on notifications for her horse-related Facebook groups where evacuees and hosts can connect, such as Cowgirl 911, which sprang up when the 2020 Labor Day fires forced evacuations all over Oregon. She says someone will post that they have a field where an evacuated animal can be moved to or where someone can ask for help in transportation.

Ashbridge says that ideally evacuees would bring their animals to Lane Events Center or coordinate with family and friends. Those who didn't have any means to move the livestock could call the county's Animal Services, which would then relocate the animals through volunteer assistance, such as Lane County Sheriff's Mounted Posse.

But sometimes it takes time for official rescue groups to get to the livestock owner, Honey says. And the official groups might require contacting the county, for example, through an online form or via phone, a problem if an area doesn't have power or cell service.

Driving to Oakridge had some difficulties, Honey says. A driver might only have a general notion of where they're picking up the livestock, and with spotty cell service there's "an added layer of chaos."

While in Oakridge, Honey says she encountered some residents who weren't too concerned about the wildfire. Seeing three horses near the golf course, she asked a couple of men drinking Keystone Light if they needed help. They declined.

In some situations it might actually be best to leave livestock. Moving an animal can be a hard transition, Honey says. "They know they won't get in a trailer," she says. "A spooked herd of cattle can jump pretty high."

Like humans, animals are affected by long term exposure to wildfire. And when evacuating animals, Honey says they have to be provided with extra water and electrolytes and salt licks.

She adds, "A lot of animals will drop weight from breathing in the smoke because they don't feel good."

Honey says that transporting livestock to other locations helps avoid overcrowding the fairgrounds, and it helps animals who may not do well in public settings and those whose owners are concerned about the potential for disease.

"The three horses I have, in particular, they've never been stalled," she says of the older horses and a pony she evacuated from Oakridge to her barn. "Putting them in corrals at the events center or stalls where they can't see their buddies that they've been living with for 10 years? Yeah, that'll really stress them out."

Ashbridge says that the county estimates about 3,000 people evacuated from Oakridge. The town has a population of about 3,336, according to Census Reporter. If conditions were to be deemed too dangerous, Ashbridge says, the county's volunteers wouldn't be able to help them out with livestock transportation.

The barrier to helping someone in that position, Honey says, is in obtaining the necessary paperwork from Lane County government to access the area. In the future, she adds, she hopes the county creates a shortlist of volunteers who have been previously vetted so she wouldn't have to drive from Pleasant Hill to downtown Eugene and then to Oakridge.

Despite some of the hurdles of traveling to the Oakridge area during the evacuation, Honey says it went smoother than with the 2020 Holiday Farm Fire, as people have become familiar with some of the language and dangers.

"Everyone learned their lesson. We warned better. We took them more seriously. I think all Oregonians now understand what the red flag warning is," she says. "I don't remember getting those when I was a kid, and now I'm like, 'Oh, shit, I know what that means.' And I know what I need to do to prep for it." ■

what's happening

This should be a powerful book launch and signing event. To start, according to the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence, one in three women and one in four men experience some form of physical violence by their intimate partner. Additionally, on a typical day, NCADV estimates that 20,000 phone calls are placed to police regarding domestic violence. Those statistics are alarming and horrifying, and Pearl Wolfe and Evelyn Anderton know many of the stories behind many of those numbers — including their own. They have collaborated on a new novel — Walk Out the Door — that takes readers through the process of the main character, Liz, leaving an abusive relationship. One reviewer notes that it is an “authentic, simultaneously tender and gritty account of Liz’s journey through the labyrinthian and insidious corridors of domestic violence.” Wolfe and Anderton have their personal stories to tell, as well as their past professional relationship with this darkness. They met in the 1990s and forged a friendship while working for Womenspace (now Hope and Safety Alliance), and they saw daily the trauma and damage suffered by those fleeing domestic violence. Both are recipients of the City of Eugene Human Rights Recognition Award.

The book signing with Pearl Wolfe and Evelyn Anderton, co-authors of the novel Walk Out the Door, is 2-4 pm Saturday, Sept. 17 at Tsunami Books, 2585 Willamette St. FREE. — Dan Buckwalter

THE SHEDD THEATRICALS PRODUCTION BRINGS A JAZZY ENERGY TO A CLASSIC BROADWAY HIT
ABOUT UNIONS

By Dorothy Velasco

If you're of a certain age and you like musical comedy, you can probably sing along with the multitude of hit songs in The Pajama Game, which opened on Broadway in 1954 and later became a popular movie starring Doris Day and John Raitt.

If you're younger, the songs will be familiar through jazz versions or elevator music. You'll recognize many of them in this buoyant, warm-hearted show now playing in the Jaqua Concert Hall at The Shedd.

The Pajama Game ran for 1,063 performances in New York and earned a Tony for best musical. The script by George Abbott and Richard Bissell, based on Bissell's novel 7 1/2 Cents, and the irresistible songs by Richard Adler and Jerry Ross take us to the heart of working class America in the 1950s.

The current production at The Shedd features a large, exceptional cast. With expert direction by Ron Daum, and Robert Ashens returning as the longtime music director and conductor for Shedd Theatricals, the well polished production is thoroughly entertaining.

The title, deliberately misleading, refers to the Sleep-Tite Pajama Factory in Iowa, where the frenzied workers churn out pajamas as fast as humanly possible. Fortunately, they belong to a labor union, and their goal is to gain a raise of seven and a half cents per hour.

Thomas Guastavino, blessed with a glorious voice and fast feet as the union president, Prez, and engaging Lynnea Barry as Babe, the smart, fearless leader of the grievance committee, are making little headway with Mr. Hasler, the company director (Brandon Weaver). Throw in a new superintendent, Sid Sorokin, portrayed by the amiable Trevor Eichhorn, and you've got an intensified dynamic. Sid has to support his boss and Babe is loyal to the workers, but obviously there's chemistry between them.

How do they get acquainted, quarrel and fall for each other? Through music, of course. By singing "Hey There," "Small Talk," "I'm Not at All in Love" and "There Once Was a Man," they lay bare their fluctuating emotions.

In addition to Sid and Babe's rocky romance and their battle between management and the union, the authors provide numerous subplots to keep the audience — and actors — satisfied. Hasler's secretary Gladys (Vanessa Greenway), and her ridiculously jealous boyfriend Vernon (Alex Mauney), are hilarious together. Grigori Malakhov as Max the salesman is also funny. Daum encourages all of the comic characters to cut loose with exaggerated body language, almost to the point of vaudevillian physical humor.

In the first act the biggest ensemble musical number is "Once-a-Year Day," sung at the action-packed annual company picnic. In the second act two song and dance routines dispose of the wholesome midwestern ambiance and stand out as original breakthrough numbers that presage a transformation of musicals to come.

What happened? The choreographer Bob Fosse (as in the biopic All That Jazz) happened. The Pajama Game gave him his first Broadway job, and audiences fell in love with his startling, innovative artistry. The first unexpected song, "Steam Heat," is sung and danced at the same time. Featuring Fosse's unusual contortions and jazz hands, black costumes, bowler hats and canes, it sets the stage for a long string of future hits. The choreographer for the Shedd production, Laura Sue Hiszczynzkyj, wisely stayed close to Fosse's original work.

Featured in the excellent, hard-working ensemble are Claude Offenbacher, Heidi Turnquist, Alicia Green, Lucy Geller, Broder Foshay, Clarae Smith, Eliana Arpaia, Hanna Foshay, Gabrielle Rios, Matthew Michaels, Jordan Andreasen, Riley Given, Nehemiah Nance and Shae Brosky.

The eye-catching costumes are by Anna Bjornsdotter, and the colorful sets are by Jim Ralph and Connie Huston.

The enthusiastic opening night spectators giggled, guffawed and applauded the show's high points from start to finish. Yes, some of them really did sing along softly. Clearly they needed some sweet, silly fun from an earlier era to provide a brief respite from our current stressful times. ■

The Pajama Game is playing at The Shedd Institute through Sept. 18; times and tickets through TheShedd.org or 541-434-7000.

Cat Rescue & Adoption Network

Cat of the Week

BARBRA STREISAND

The Cat Rescue & Adoption Network presents BARBRA STREISAND, a cute gray tabby female kitty with hints of tortoiseshell in her coat. About 2 years old, Barbra loves to be around people, and is a friendly, curious, playful, and sweet-natured kitty. She's not fond of other cats and will do best as an only cat. Barbra is happy being an indoor-only cat, and she enjoys cuddling and making biscuits on your lap. She's spayed, vaccinated, microchipped, negative for FeLV & FIV, and in excellent health. To meet Barbra, please call 541-225-4955 option 1, or visit our website at CatRescues.org

We are the longest running cat rescue in Lane County and are all-volunteer and receive no public funding. Since 2007, we have provided care and found homes for over 4000 cats.

Meet handsome pup, Emilio! He not only has gorgeous multicolored eyes, he has a beautiful black and white thick coat! He is a 2-year-old husky mix who is looking for his forever adventure bud. Emilio loves exploring outside, playing with toys, and sniffing lots of sniffs. He is really fun to watch play with toys and always has a smile on his face. Our staff loves that he always greets us with a warm welcome and has such a goofy personality. He would thrive in a household that will provide him with plenty of exercise and continue with positive reinforcement training. He is smart and has made great progress since arriving at the shelter. A volunteer said, "He is so handsome! And super smart, is really fun and has a dog sense of humor!" Emilio would do best as the only pet in the home and prefers the company of older teens as he is always ready to party. He weighs between 70-75 lbs., is neutered, microchipped, and up to date on vaccines. Emilio would make a wonderful dog to an active, loving family!

BY ROB BREZSNY

ARIES (MARCH 21-APRIL 19): My reader Monica Ballard has this advice for you Aries folks: “If you don’t vividly ask for and eagerly welcome the gifts the Universe has in store for you, you may have to settle for trinkets and baubles. So never settle.” That’s always useful counsel for you Rams. And in the coming weeks, you will be wise to heed it with extra intensity. Here’s a good metaphor to spur you on: Don’t fill up on junk snacks or glitzy hors d’oeuvres. Instead, hold out for gourmet feasts featuring healthy, delectable entrées.

TAURUS (APRIL 20-MAY 20): I will remind you about a potential superpower that is your birthright to develop: You can help people to act in service to the deepest truths and strongest love. You can even teach them how to do it. Have you been ripening this talent in 2022? Have you been bringing it more to the forefront of your relationships? I hope so. The coming months will stir you to go further than ever before in expressing this gift. For best results, take a vow to nurture the deepest truths and strongest love in all your thoughts and dealings with others.

GEMINI (MAY 21-JUNE 20): Your mind is sometimes a lush and beautiful maze that you get lost in. Is that a problem? Now and then it is, yes. But just as often, it’s an entertaining blessing. As you wander around amidst the lavish finery, not quite sure of where you are or where you’re going, you often make discoveries that rouse your half-dormant potentials. You luckily stumble into unforeseen insights you didn’t realize you needed to know. I believe the description I just articulated fits your current ramble through the amazing maze. My advice: Don’t be in a mad rush to escape. Allow this dizzying but dazzling expedition to offer you all its rich teachings.

CANCER (JUNE 21-JULY 22): “Poetry is a life-cherishing force,” said Pulitzer Prize-winner Mary Oliver, who published 33 volumes of poetry and read hundreds of other poets. Her statement isn’t true for everyone, of course. To reach the point where reading poetry provides our souls with nourishment, we may have to work hard to learn how to appreciate it. Some of us don’t have the leisure or temperament to do so. In any case, Cancerian, what are your life-cherishing forces? What influences inspire you to know and feel all that’s most precious about your time on earth? Now would be an excellent time to ruminate on those treasures — and take steps to nurture them with tender ingenuity.

LEO (JULY 23-AUG. 22): Please promise me you will respect and revere your glorious star power in the coming weeks. I feel it’s important, both to you and those whose lives you touch, that you exalt and exult in your access to your magnificence. For everyone’s benefit, you should play freely with the art of being majestic and regal and sovereign. To do this right, you must refrain from indulging in trivial wishes, passing fancies and minor attractions. You must give yourself to what’s stellar. You must serve your holiest longings, your riveting dreams and your thrilling hopes.

VIRGO (AUG. 23-SEPT. 22): It’s impossible to be perfect. It’s neither healthy nor productive to obsess on perfectionism. You know these things. You understand you can’t afford to get bogged down in overthinking and overreaching and overpolishing. And when you are at your best, you sublimate such manic urges. You transform them into the elegant intention to clarify and refine and refresh. With grace and care, you express useful beauty instead of aiming for hyper-immaculate precision. I believe that in the coming weeks, dear Virgo, you will be a master of these services — skilled at performing them for yourself and others.

LIBRA (SEPT. 23-OCT. 22): According to Libran poet T. S. Eliot, “What we call the beginning is often the end. And to make an end is to make a beginning. The end is where we start from.” Those are your guiding thoughts for the coming days, Libra. You’re almost ready to start fresh; you’re on the verge of being able to start planning your launch date or grand opening. Now all you have to do is create a big crisp emptiness where the next phase will have plenty of room to germinate. The best way to do that is to finish the old process as completely as possible.

SCORPIO (OCT. 23-NOV. 21): Now and then, you slip into phases when you’re poised on the brink of either self-damage or self-discovery. You wobble and lurch on the borderline where self-undoing vies with self-creation. Whenever this situation arises, here are key questions to ask yourself: Is there a strategy you can implement to ensure that you glide into self-discovery and self-creation? Is there a homing thought that will lure you away from the perverse temptations of self-damage and self-undoing? The answers to these queries are always yes — if you regard love as your top priority and if you serve the cause of love over every other consideration.

SAGITTARIUS (NOV. 22-DEC. 21): “Sometimes serendipity is just intention unmasked,” said Sagittarian author Elizabeth Berg. I suspect her theory will be true for you in the coming weeks. You have done an adroit job of formulating your intentions and collecting the information you need to carry out your intentions. What may be best now is to relax your focus as you make room for life to respond to your diligent preparations. “I’m a great believer in luck,” said my Uncle Ned. “I’ve found that the harder I work, the more luck I have.” He was correct, but it’s also true that luck sometimes surges your way when you’ve taken a break from your hard work.

CAPRICORN (DEC. 22-JAN. 19): Tips to get the most out of the next six weeks: 1. Be the cautiously optimistic voice of reason. Be the methodical motivator who prods and inspires. Organize as you uplift. Encourage others as you build efficiency. 2. Don’t take other people’s apparent stupidity or rudeness as personal affronts. Try to understand how the suffering they have endured may have led to their behavior. 3. Be your own father. Guide yourself as a wise and benevolent male elder would. 4. Seek new ways to experience euphoria and enchantment, with an emphasis on what pleasures will also make you healthier.

AQUARIUS (JAN. 20-FEB. 18): Aquarian author Richard Ford has advice for writers: “Find what causes a commotion in your heart. Find a way to write about that.” I will amend his counsel to apply to all of you non-writers, as well. By my reckoning, the coming weeks will be prime time to be gleefully honest as you identify what causes commotions in your heart. Why should you do that? Because it will lead you to the good decisions you need to make in the coming months. As you attend to this holy homework, I suggest you direct the following invitation to the universe: “Beguile me, mystify me, delight me, fascinate me, and rouse me to feel deep, delicious feelings.”

PISCES (FEB. 19-MARCH 20): “I am lonely, yet not everybody will do,” observed Piscean author Anaïs Nin. “Some people fill the gaps, and others emphasize my loneliness,” she concluded. According to my reading of the astrological omens, Pisces, it’s your task right now to identify which people intensify your loneliness and which really do fill the gaps. And then devote yourself with extra care to cultivating your connections with the gap-fillers. Loneliness is sometimes a good thing — a state that helps you renew and deepen your communion with your deep self. But I don’t believe that’s your assignment these days. Instead, you’ll be wise to experience intimacy that enriches your sense of feeling at home in the world. You’ll thrive by consorting with allies who sweeten your love of life.

Homework: I invite you to send a blessing to someone you regard as challenging to bless. Testify: Newsletter.FreeWillAstrology.com.

I SAW YOU

YOU'VE SEEN ME make so many mistakes. Do you really need to see how foolish I look without you?

SAVAGE LOVE

BY DAN SAVAGE

I'm monogamous and have been dating my boyfriend who identifies as straight for a little over a year. He told me that he had a strict “no contact with exes” policy when we first met. Due to some sketchy behavior, lies and gaslighting on his part — regarding contacts with his ex-girlfriends, open dating profiles, and multiple private Instagram accounts — I checked his phone, and my suspicions were confirmed. He didn't cheat but there were some inappropriate messages that he apologized for. He blocked all his exes and is on the straight and narrow now.

At the time I checked his phone, I also found strange messages to one of his male friends. My BF sent this guy nudes and videos of him having sex with other women. (This was before we met.) There were also messages detailing how much they admired and missed each other's cocks, and my boyfriend said he wanted to fuck other women with his friend. When I asked him about his relationship with this man, he said that they are just good friends, and that this kind of sexting was “something straight guys do.” I don't think any of my past straight boyfriends ever talked about missing other guys' cocks, but this is the first boyfriend whose phone I ever checked for shenanigans. Is this something straight guys do?

I don't care if my boyfriend was bisexual, but I don't want to be lied to. And I really don't want to be the crazy girlfriend, but my boyfriend had framed photos of this particular guy in his house that I made him remove. I also asked him to cut off all contact with this man. This is all fresh in my mind because we ran into this guy the other night. They kept telling each other how good they both looked and my BF was visibly nervous the whole time. Is my boyfriend telling me the truth? Do straight guys who don't have any sexual interest in their friends send them dick pics? My BF is in his mid-40s. He knows I'm bi. The “no contact with exes” rule was his idea, not mine, and I think this guy counts as an ex and should remain blocked. Do you agree?

— Straight Men Exchanging Long Lusty Texts Exuding Sexual Tension

Your boyfriend made the rule — no contact with exes (not even eye contact on the subway?) — but at some point, after the lying and gaslighting, you became the enforcer: digging through his phone, ordering him to block his exes, take down framed photos, etc.

He was apparently willing to overlook your snooping, SMELLTEST, seeing as you're still together. And you were apparently willing to overlook the mountain of incriminating evidence you found on his phone. While you honored his “no contact with exes” rule from the start, he was swapping texts, sexts and photos with his exes the whole time, lurking on dating apps and maintaining multiple Instagram accounts. You concluded he hadn't cheated on you — he just broke his own stupid rule — but in my experience, SMELLTEST, “rules for thee, not for me” types are rarely very good at honoring monogamous commitments over the long term. I'm not saying he's cheated on you already, but if not getting cheated on ever is important to you... he might not be the guy.

As for his claim that swapping dick pics and compliments are things straight guys do... I haven't had a chance to snoop through Harry Styles' phone, SMELLTEST, so I can't definitively say that no straight guy has ever sent another straight guy his dick pics. (Or spat on another straight guy at a film premiere.) And seeing as lots of straight men enjoy playing “gay chicken” these days (and posting the videos to TikTok), it stands to reason that some straight guys may be swapping dick pics and ironic messages about how badly they want each other's cocks for the lols. But I don't think that kind of behavior is common among straight guys, particularly straight guys in their 40s.

My hunch is that your guy had and enjoyed a few MMF threesomes with this guy before you met, and it was in that context — with a woman in the room to heterosexualize any incidental homosexual contact — that he came to appreciate his friend's cock. Seeing as you dug through his phone long enough to find all the dating apps he's on, all the messages he'd been swapping with ex-girlfriends, and all those fake Instagram accounts, SMELLTEST, if he was bisexual you probably would've found messages he'd sent to other men and his Grindr, Scruff, and Sniffies accounts too.

If this friend is the only guy your boyfriend has ever messed around with, SMELLTEST, if that one guy's cock is the only cock he's ever wanted to push past his tonsils, your boyfriend is free to round himself down to straight. I also don't think having messed around with this one dude makes them “exes” in the romantic/dating sense of the term, and I think you should let your boyfriend put his picture back up.

Finally, SMELLTEST, what the two of you are doing — this guy with his no-contact rules about exes and his lies, you with your snooping and demands to take down photos — sounds so exhausting. Is this a relationship or a police state? If he can manage to remain monogamous and gets a charge out of swapping dick pics with an old friend, what harm is there in that? Why not let him have that? And if the guy was hot... why not let both of them have you?

P.S. I hope those videos you BF sent his friend of him having sex with other women were taken with the consent of those other women and that he had their permission to share those videos with his friend.
